Consideration of Evaluation Process for the City's Welcome Sign

Public Works Director Jim Hossley stated last August some Board Members expressed an interest in revising the City's welcome sign logo. Mr. Hossley stated artist Justin Macduff with Macduff Design, who helped create the Coos Waterfront Walkway logo, was under contract with the City and was preparing ideas for the City logo. Another artist expressed interest and submitted an idea at no cost to the City. Mr. Hossley anticipated the artists' concepts would be available for review in mid-March. Staff requested guidance on creating a process for evaluating the City welcome sign concepts. Board Member Shoji suggested the public input received to date should be expressed and an evaluation committee formed to assist in the process. Some of the local artists have offered to be involved. Board Member Vaughan stated graphic arts, communication arts, and fine arts were different professions and cautioned design assistance. Board Member Daily suggested a firm specializing in city logos would benefit the process. City Manager Rodger Craddock suggested the work for the trail signs had a good process and recommended a similar process. Board Member Shoji confirmed those who had asked to participate could participate at a reviewer level and suggested other logo submissions should be considered. Board Member Groth stated Justin Macduff was hired as a graphic artist for the Coos Waterfront Walkway process for their recent sign selection and facilitated a good
